

Clue G

Scientists examined the bodies carefully and discovered that nearly all of the bodies bear many traces of injuries that seem to have been caused by axes, swords and spears before being thrown in a mass grave.

Axe head from the time

Clue H

Gnaeus Julius Agricola , Roman General who conquered most of Britain, gathered an invasion force on the Clyde-Forth line. He stood on the shores of western Scotland with an exiled Irish chieftain by his side and gazed across the narrow North Channel to the Antrim hills, in Ireland.

Clue I

The discovery took place only 2 kilometres away from the fort at Drumanagh, near Dublin. When that first site was discovered in 1996 some archaeologists claimed that the fort was built by invading Roman soldiers.
